The Archbishop of Valencia, attended by an innuential deputation, acting on behalf of the insurgents lately and still in arms in that city, and within the limits of the Episcopal See, has just sought an interview with the officer in command of the government troops operating in the district. The Archbishop interceded in behalf of the insurgents and in support of the authorities, making terms with leniency towards them. When the deputation retired a general military council was held, at which the subject was debated. It was finally decided that the insurgents must all surrender at discretion.

MADRID, October 17. The insurgents at Valencia, after a battle yesterday, which lasted several hours, surrendered unconditionally. The leaders disappeared, bu are believed to be secreted in the city or vicinity. The government forces now occupy the city. The settings of the Cortes were suspended without the appointment of a day for reassembling. It is not known when the session will be resumed.

LONDON, October 17. A dispatch from Madrid contains the following particulars of the surrender at Valencia: General Prim, by telegraph, ordered the general commanding the troops before Valencia to attack the city, and yesterday morning the artillery opened a heavy fire on the rebel positions, producing much effect and causing great damage to property. The insurgents offered to surrender on condition of receiving their liberty, but this was refused. The assault was then resumed with vigor until the surrender of the insurgents. The general commanding reports that the insurrection has been completely suppressed, and the troops now hold the entire city. Many houses were burned during the fight, and a large number of rebels were captured with arms in their hands. Previous to the attack, the clergy exhorted the insurgents to yield, but without effect.

A Pleasant Assurance from the President of the Republic.

THE YERGER CASE.

The Principles Involved-The Court Threatened-What President Grant is Told will be his Duty in a Certain Contingency.

[FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, October 16. The leading topic of interest in the capital just now is the case ex parte Yerger, which has just been argued before the Supreme Court-a case familiar to the people of the South, and to the whole country, inasmuch as it involves the power law, the trial of a civilian by military commis sion in time of peace, and in a State and district where civil courts are open. It is unnecessary to go into the details of the case. Suffice it to say that Mr. Yerger was tried by a military commission at Jackson, Mississippi, for an offence against the laws of that State found guilty, and sentenced to suffer death. His counsel, however, brought the case before the Chief Justice of the United States, on a motion for a habeas corpus, several months ago, when, by stipulation between them and the Attorney-General of the United States, it was agreed that the motion should be argued at the present term of the court, and in the meantime the sentence imposed by the military commission should be suspended. Mr. Yerger, however, is still in prison and his case is upon the docket of the highest judicial tribunal in the country, where the power of the law-making department of the governmen to authorize the trial of civilians in any other way than that pointed out by the constitution, is to be finally, and, I hope, forever determined.

It will be remembered that the power claimed in this instance is found in one or more of the numerous "Reconstruction" acts, so-called, which have been passed by Congress since the close of the war, and as those acts rest upon an assumed authority on the part of the Federal Government, to render the civil power in the South subordinate and inferior to the military, and. In the Senate there is one, in the House the opinion of the court in this case will be of the so great a question.

If it shall be adjudged that Congress has no power to establish military government and mili tary law, in any State or States of the Union, in time of peace, the botfom will be knocked out of the "reconstruction" tub; and sooner or later, every act of that body, relating to the government of the Southern States, will share the same fate, and the country will again be restored to its former system of free government, sustained and strengthened by a constitutional recognition of the reserved rights of the several States.

It requires no argument to show the illegality and unconstitutionality of the trial of civilian by military tribunals in places where civil courts are open. The Constitution of the United States is so clear and explicit on this subject, that he who would attempt to controvert it must either be set down as a knave or a fool. It may, however, be interesting to your readers in forming an opinion as to the probable result of the case referred to above, to mention a similar The North Carolina State Fair opened at Ra- and a very celebrated case which is still fresh in of the great principle involved, may with trut be styled the most important case ever determined by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Lambdin P. Milligan, a citizen of the United States, and a resident and citizen of the State of Indiana, was arrested on the 3d day of October. 1864, at his home in said State, by order of Brevet Major-General Hovey, military commander of the District of Indiana, and by the same authority confined in a military prison at or near Indianapolis, the capital of the State. On the 21st day of the same month, he was placed on trial before a "military commission" convened at Indianapo lis, by order of the said general, upon the follow ing charges preferred by Major Burnett, Judge Advocate of the Northwestern Military Depart ment, namely:

Conspiracy against the Government of the United States.
 Affording aid and comfort to the rebels against the authority of the United States.

Inciting insurrection.
 Disloyal practices, and,
 Violation of the laws of war.

the 19th of May, 1865.

On the 18th of that same May, 1865, Milligan filed his petition for a habeas corpus in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Indiana. After setting forth the facts con nected with his arrest and trial by "military commission," the findings, sentence, approval thereof, &c., he then set forth the additional fact that while he was held and detained, as already mentioned, in military custody, (and more than twenty days after his arrest,) a grand jury for the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Indiana, was convened at Indianapolis, his said place of confinement, and duly empanelled, charged and sworn for said district, held its sittings, and finally adjourned without having found any bill of indictment, or made any presentment whatever against him; that at no time had he been in the military service of the United States, or in any way connected with the land, or naval force, or the militia in actual service, &c. At the hearing of the petition in the Circui Court the opinions of the Judges were divided or the following questions, namely: I. "On the facts stated in the petition and ex I. "On the facts stated in the petition and exhibits ought the writ of habeas corpus to be issued according to the prayer of said petitioner?"

II. "On the facts stated in the petition and exhibits ought the said Milligan to be discharged from custody, as in said petition prayed?"

III. "Whether upon the facts stated in the petition and exhibits the military commission had jurisdiction, legally, to try and sentence said Milligan in manner and form as in said petition and exhibit is stated!"

exhibit is stated?" On the division of opinion mentioned above these questions were certified to the Supreme Court of the United States and argued at the De cember term, 1865. The opinion of the Court thereon was delivered the following term, and may be found in 4th Wallace, commencing at page 107. The opinion is a very elaborate and exhaustive one, reviewing the whole case, and emphatically declaring that Congress has no power to author ize the trial of civilians by military commission in places where civil tribunals are open, and where they might be regularly and fairly tried according to the constitution and laws of the United States and of the State wherein the al leged offence was committed.

In proceeding, the court said: In proceeding, the court said:
"Every trial involves the exercise of judicial power; and from what source did the military commission that tried him (Milligan) derive their authority? Certainly no part of the judicial power of the country was conferred on them, because the constitution expressly vests it 'in one Supreme Court and such inferior courts as Congress may from time to time ordain and establish; and it is not pretended that the commission was a court ordained and ed that the commission was a court ordained and established by Congress. They cannot justify on trolled by law, and has his appropriate sphere of duty, which is to execute, not to make, the laws; and there is no unwritten criminal code to which resort can be had as a source of jurisdiction."

Again:

Again:
"Martial rule can never exist where the courts are open and in the proper and unobstructed exercise of their jurisdiction."
"So sensitive were our Revolutionary fathers on this subject, although Boston was almost in a state of slege, when General Gage issued his proclamation of martial law, they spoke of it as an "attempt to supercede the course of the common law, and instead thereof to publish and order the use of martial law."

What the court said of martial law, established What the court said of martial law, established by order of the President or of a military commander, is equally applicable in the case of Yerger. It is to be noted that the recent discussion of the case was confined, by order of the Judges, fresh flowers and badges bearing the names of to the question of jurisdiction. Should this matthe States and Territories. 'er be decided favorably for the petitioner, the $81,000,000.

which must necessarily involve the validity of the Reconstruction acts, partially at least. With the very organization of the court at the mercy of ongress, there is a well-grounded fear perhaps that the case will be disposed of upon some tech nical point. The executive and legislative branches of the government being in manifest and unchecked conspiracy against the vital principles of the constitution, it would perhaps be expecting too much, in the opinion of some, to conclude that the other utterly powerless branch would enter into a contest which would probably end in its own "reconstruction," according to current Radical usurpations. Yet there are signs in of the Federal Government to authorize, even by | dicating that a majority of that august tribunal will do their full duty, irrespective of its personal bearing. In apprehension that the writ will not only be granted, but the petitioner turned over to the courts upon grounds touching the powers of Congress, Forney's Chronicle, the recognized organ of the administration here, thus threat next question to come up will be on the merits,

"If, as is now apprehended, the majority of the adges should assume, in granting this writ, to judges should assume, in granting this writ, to declare the acts of reconstruction unconstitution al, a grave duty will devolve upon the Executive. The same paper has heretofore declared it to be not only the "duty," but one that will be cheerfully performed by the President. In other words, if the court shall decide, (what it has al. ready, in fact, decided in the Milligan case,) that a military upstart and his shabby staff cannot, in this country, string up or shoot down at random citizens, guilty or not guilty, in the midst of a peaceful people amenable to civil legal courts confessedly open, and where justice, according to the constitution and laws of the United States can be and constantly is administered, and shall further order that the present culprit shall be turned over to the proper legal tribunal for trial that in that case his Excellency will issue military orders to his military satrap, that the mandate of the court shall be contemptuously disobeyed The Radicals have been guilty of many abominations, but have never yet essayed so glaring and impudent an assumption as this.

As it was loaded, it frightened the family considerably to see her manœuver it in her off-hand way. After dinner she smoked her cigar like the other gentlemen of the party." -Americans who have visited the Cathedral of Notre Dame, at Paris, during the Sunday morning services, will recall the rather peculiar appearance of the "man in the serge his person, brought the people assembled Above the middle height, broad-shouldered, with a stoop in the back as if he had some robes; a short, thick neck, that brings down his chin almost upon a level with his breast, giving him a muffled look; a wide mouth, dominated by an aquiline nose, which, if size be an indication of genius, must make this man a prodigy; clear, bright eyes, set well apart toward the temples; a broad massive forehead, retreating on each side with a wonderful development of the perceptive faculties thin, brownish hair, never very carefully cared for, and generally suffered to take its own way, and shining from every part of this remarkable physiognomy, a spirit of deepest humility more marked from the look of resolution accompanying it, serve to make up the tout ensemble of the Pere Hyacinthe.

septl lyr D. C. THE GREAT VITALIZER.-THIS title may be fairly given to a restorative which has taken precedence of all other tonic and al-erative preparations for a period of nearly twenty years. During that long interval HOSTET-TER'S STOMACH BITTERS may be truly said to have enjoyed unrivalled popularity. Many preparations have been got up to compete with it but they have all fallen into its wake or sunk into oblivion for lack of patronage. From the gown," who, with a voice as remarkable as first, this now world-renowned Vegetable Tonic has been both medically and financially successfrom all parts of the capital to hear him. ful. Every year has added to the number of its friends, and the demand for it, based solely upon the experimental proofs of its excellence as a prething concealed there beneath his clerical ventive and curative, seems to have no assignable limit. The medical profession sanction and approve its use, and it is now at the head of the class of medicines to which it belongs, the admitted, undisputed sovereign tonic of the age The statistics of the United States Revenue De partment will verify the statement that it stands alone and unapproached in the magnitude of its sales as compared with those of any other proprietary remedy advertised on this side of the At-

> The explanation of this fact may be comprised in a few words. HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BIT-TERS is at once the purest, the safest and the most potent of all vegetable tonics, and the bes antidote to every variety of malarious disease Hence it is especially adapted to the present season of chilling dews and unwholesome vapors.
